OBSERVATION

Chinese Newcomers Service Center
- Helps Chinese newcomers.
- Employment support, public benefits, English classes, local services.

Mission Neighborhood Resource Center
Provides basic services, housing support, referrals, and other resources for homeless and low-income residents in the Mission District.

La Raza Community Resource Center
- Bilingual immigration assistance.
- Help with government services for immigrant families.

Chinese Culture Center of San Francisco
- Exhibitions, workshops, public programs.
- Discussions about Chinese American culture.

Centro Latino de San Francisco
- Meals, classes, social activities.
- Support for Latino seniors, adults with disabilities, and immigrant families.

Chinatown Community Development Center
- Affordable-housing support.
- tenant services, community programs.
- assistance for Chinatown residents.

CARECEN SF
- Family wellness, health programs.
- Community resources.

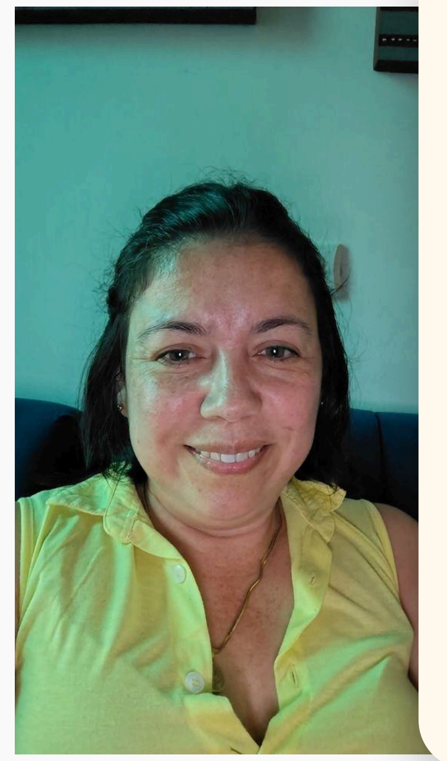
Instituto Familiar de la Raza
- Mental-health services,
- Family counseling, youth programs, and community support.

USER INTERVIEW

Carlos Hernández

Age: 46
From: Mexico
In the U.S.: 9 years
Occupation: cleaning supervisor.

Uses basic English and relies on his daughter or translation tools for complex communication. Finds jobs through friends and Facebook groups, but often worries about unclear or fake job information.



María González

Age: 53
From: Mexico
In the U.S.: 4 years
Occupation: cleaning staff member.

Uses basic English and often needs Google Translate, friends, or others' help for job messages. Finds jobs through WhatsApp, Facebook, and referrals, but rarely uses Indeed because it feels too complex.

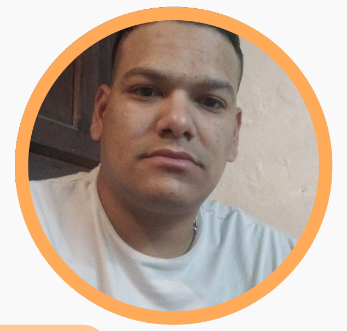
"There is too much information, and I'm not sure which jobs are real."

"Many job posts are in English, so it's hard to understand."

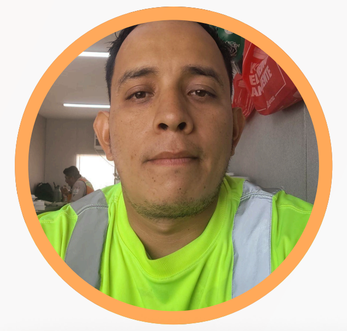
"I applied for many jobs but never got a reply. It feels like a waste of time, and sometimes I wonder if something is wrong with me."

"Friend referrals are the best because I can trust them and know what the job is really like."

"I chose this job because it is stable, and my brother used to do the same work."



"Because someone I know has done this job before."



"I'm afraid I might misunderstand my boss when communicating."

Too much information creates confusion.

Users value stable and trustworthy opportunities

Fast responses improve the overall experience.

Communication barriers make the process harder.

"They Rely Heavily On Friends And Community Networks To Find Jobs. Limited English And Legal Challenges Can Make Online Job Searching Difficult."

User Persona

> Jobs introduced by friends feel safer, because someone has already worked there before.

Ms. Chen | 48

Background: Chinese immigrant, moved to San Francisco about one year ago
Language: Mandarin and Cantonese; limited English
Work Type: Cleaning, kitchen work, moving, warehouse work, delivery

Bio

Ms. Chen is a Chinese immigrant who moved to San Francisco one year ago. She is seeking cleaning jobs through WeChat groups, Chinese websites, and referrals.

Limited English makes it difficult for her to understand job details, pay, and employer trustworthiness.

Technology

灣區華人資訊網
ChineseInSFBay.com
华人资讯 一网打尽

Goals
- Find short-term cleaning jobs quickly
- Understand pay, time, and location clearly
- Know if the job is real and safe
- Feel more confident when messaging employers
- Avoid wasting time on unclear jobs

Frustrations
- Most job posts are in English
- She is not familiar with U.S. job rules
- Job details are often incomplete
- She worries the pay may be different from what was promised
- She is nervous about messaging employers in English
- No reply makes her feel unsure whether to keep waiting or move on