Can someone help me understand this message from an employer? I used Google Translate, but I am not sure if I need to bring my own cleaning tools.

I worked with this family last weekend. The job was the same as the post, and they paid on time. The house is close to the 24th Street BART station.

The value of this project is that it is not just a job-search app, but a system that connects job opportunities, language support, community trust, and local service centers to help new immigrants find work more safely and clearly.
Through this project, I learned that design is not only about improving interfaces, but also about understanding users' real-life challenges, such as language barriers, lack of trust, and limited labor protection.

In the future, LaborLink could work with more community centers, local employers, and public organizations to improve job verification, worker support, and labor protection.
